INFORMATION

REPORT INFORMATION REPORT

-2-

- 5. Investigations concerning illegal border crossings, illegal fishing, and espionage were carried out in the MGB headquarters at Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk (see sketch No. 2, page 9). The Soviets resorted to force and brutality in their interrogation. When the MGB was incorporated into the MVD after the death of Stalin, the headquarters at Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk was placed under the MVD and its scope of responsibility expanded to include civil crimes. All-night interrogations were discontinued.
- 6. Prisoners were sent to the Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk Prison (see sketch No. 3, page 10) for espionage charges, as well as to Tayshet (N 55-57, E 98-02) in Irkutsk Oblast. There were approximately 700 prisoners at the Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk Prison and a total of 27 guards on duty. The prison was undergoing repairs in March 1954. The treatment of prisoners improved after Malenkov's assumption of power.
- 7. Following the reorganization of the MVD and MGB, only espicmage suspects were kept in the Yughno-Sakhalinsk Military Courts Prison (see sketch No. 4, page 11). Watch dogs were used on the perimeters for security reasons. The treatment at the prison was fair.
- 8. It was rumored that a change in the criminal code was to be effected in April 1954 and that sentences, therefore, would be shortened.

Town of Yushno-Sakhalinsk

9. A two-story restaurant was located approximately two blocks south of the MGB headquarters. A hospital was located near the restaurant. The facilities there were very poor. The roads in the city had not been improved since the Japanese occupation. The only concrete road is the former Jinja. However, there were many new automobiles. Trains with wooden seats were in constant use.

Prices and Wages

- 10. Laborers in Sakhalin were experiencing difficulty in making a living. The monthly cost of living was approximately 1,000 rubles, and the laborers were making about 700 rubles per month. The people who made a comfortable living were the secret police, whose officers received approximately 3,000 rubles a month.
- 11. Clothing and vegetables were expensive. The following were some prices up to March 1954:

Item	Unit	Cost (in rubles)
Butter	1 kg	27
Black bread	1 kg	1.5
White bread	1 kg	2.5 to 3
